

INTRODUCTION

The Saṅkara Kāṇḍa—Its Nature and Scope

1. The Saṅkara Kāṇḍa (SK) in four chapters is a basic work of Mīmāṃsā by Jaimini, which, together with his better known and widely studied Tantra Kāṇḍa or Dvādaśalakṣaṇī, makes up the complete Pūrvamīmāṃsā-Śāstra. The main object of the SK is the redaction of those principles of interpretation of Dharma which had not been included in the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī.¹ It also forms a continuation of and supplement to the last two chapters of the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī in that, like those two chapters, viz., the Tantra and the Prasaṅga adhyāyas, it too has been composed for the interpretation, on the principles of upadeśa and atideśa, of Dharma set forth in obscure and ambiguous Vedic passages.² It bases itself mainly on the rules enunciated in the first twelve chapters and discusses the further application of those rules to other mantras in some other contexts.³

2. A short commentary on the SK, the Bhāṭṭacandrikā, by the 18th century polymath Bhāskararāya, has since long been before the scholars⁴ but the original Sūtras were not to be had. This made the work appear suspect. The truncated topical (adhikaraṇa) Sūtras available with the commentary hardly helped to clear these doubts; in fact they only served to deepen them.⁵ A unique manuscript of the original Sūtras, now discovered and presented here in a critical edition with a detailed discussion on the genuineness and authenticity of the SK, should suffice to dispel the doubts hitherto entertained about this ancient work.

Manuscript of the Sūtras

3. The discovery of this manuscript of the SK Sūtras was made in the family collection of 767 palm-leaf and paper manuscripts of R. Krishnaswami Sastri of Tanjore acquired by the late R. A. Sastri some years back for the Madras University Library. This manuscript, No. 62 of the collection, is in palm-leaf (7 $\frac{1}{2}$ "x1 $\frac{1}{4}$ ") and is written in very readable and generally correct Grantha script. Folio 1 of the manuscript commences with the sūtra स आह्वनीयः स्यादाहुतिसंयोगात्, being XII.iv.24 of the Dvādaśalakaṣaṇī. The last chapter of the Dvādaśalakaṣaṇī is concluded on folio 2 with the colophon: द्वादशस्य चतुर्थः पादः. The SK sūtras are commenced next and are continued upto folio 21, where the manuscript breaks off with the first sūtra of ch. II, pāda i, of the SK. Though written in close continuation of the Dvādaśalakaṣaṇī, the SK is considered here as a separate work, its chapter and pāda colophons reading, सङ्कर्षकाण्डे प्रथमस्य प्रथमः पादः, प्रथमस्य द्वितीयः पादः etc. It may, however be noted that the flyleaf of the manuscript, on which are written some of the pratīkas of the sūtras, treats the SK as an organic continuation of the Dvādaśalakaṣaṇī, the chapter prefixes given there being '१३ अध्याये,' and "१४ अध्याये".

Viṁśatyadyāyam Mīmāṃsā-Śāstram

4. Tradition holds that Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra in its full form consists of twenty chapters, the first sixteen constituting Pūva-Mīmāṃsā and the remaining four, Uttara-Mīmāṃsā or Vedānta. Thus, in his Brahmasūtra-Bhāṣya, Śāṅkara implies that the 'Śāstra' commences with the Pūvamīmāṃsā-Sūtras when he says, on Brahmasūtra III.iii.53 : ननु शास्त्रप्रमुख एव प्रथमे पादे शास्त्रफलोपभोगयोग्यस्य देहव्यतिरिक्तस्वात्मनोऽस्तित्वमुक्तम् । सम्यगुक्तं भाष्यकृता [शबरस्वामिना] न तु तत्रात्मास्तित्वे सूत्रमस्ति । इह तु स्वयमेव सूत्रकृता तदस्तित्वमाक्षेपपुरस्सरं प्रतिष्ठापितम् । Śāṅkara further terms the Mīmāṃsāsūtras the 'First treatise' (prathama-tantra) and the Vedāntasūtras, the 'Remainder' (śeṣa) of the 'Full Śāstra' (kṛtsna-śāstra); cf. अत एव च भगवता उपवर्षेण प्रथमे तन्त्रे आत्मास्तित्वाभिधानप्रसक्तौ "शारीरके वक्ष्यामः" इत्युद्धारः कृतः । इह चेदे चोदनालक्षणेपूपासनेषु विचार्यमाणेषु आत्मास्तित्वं विचार्यते कृत्स्नशास्त्र-शेषत्वप्रदर्शनाय । (Bhāṣya on III.iii.53). This tradition is discernable down the ages.

5. On the composition of the Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra, the Prapañcahṛdaya which sets out to describe the various systems of traditional learning elaborates thus : तत्र साङ्गोपाङ्गस्य वेदस्य पूर्वोत्तरकाण्डसंभिन्नस्याशेषवाक्यार्थविचार-परायणं मीमांसाशास्त्रम् । तदिदं विशत्यध्यायनिबद्धम् । तत्र षोडशाध्यायनिबद्धं पूर्वमीमांसा-शास्त्रं पूर्वकाण्डस्य धर्मविचारपरायणं जैमिनिकृतम् । तदन्यदध्यायचतुष्कं उत्तरमीमांसाशास्त्रं

उत्तरकाण्डस्य ब्रह्मविचारपरायणं व्यासकृतम् ।⁶ Rāmānuja, the expounder of the Viśiṣṭādvaita school of Vedānta, observes : मीमांसाशास्त्रम्—‘अथातो धर्मजिज्ञासा’ (Mīmāṃsāsūtra I.i.1) इत्यारभ्य ‘अनावृत्तिः शब्दादनावृत्तिः शब्दात्’ (Brahmasūtra IV.iv.22) इत्येवमन्तं सङ्गतिविशेषेण विशिष्टक्रमम् ।⁷ His follower Vedāntadeśika says the same thing with the further detail that totally the Śāstra consists of twenty chapters : ‘अथातो धर्मजिज्ञासा’ (Mīmāṃsāsūtra I.i.1) इत्यारभ्य ‘अनावृत्तिः शब्दादनावृत्तिः शब्दात्’ (Brahmasūtra IV.iv.22) इत्येवमन्तं विंशतिलक्षणं मीमांसाख्यमेकं शास्त्रम् ।⁸ The same author introduces his comments on the first sūtra of Mīmāṃsā : विंशतिलक्षणयां वक्ष्यमाणं कृत्स्नवेदार्थ-विचारं प्रतिजानीति—‘अथातो धर्मजिज्ञासा’ (I. i. 1).⁹ Exponents of other schools also refer to the complementary nature of the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī, Saṅkarṣa Kāṇḍa and Brahmasūtra. Epigraphical evidence for the twenty-chapter division of Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra is forthcoming in a South Indian inscription, No. 76 of 1932-33, from Anur, Chingleput Dt., Madras, dated A.D. 999, where, among other qualifications for a Brāhman to receive Bhāṭṭa-vṛtti (‘living for a learned Brāhmaṇa’), a knowledge of the Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra in “Twenty chapters” is prescribed.¹⁰

The SK and its genuineness

6. By its very structure the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī (Tantra Kāṇḍa) of the Pūrvamīmāṃsā-Śāstra was self-complete so far as the enunciation of the principles of interpretation of dharma and the elucidation of the methodology of the application of Vedic mantras were concerned. And this resulted in the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī being considered, rightly enough, as a complete work. It gained also wide prominence through the Bhāṣya of Śabara and the Vārttika of Kumārila, and the mass of literature which followed in their wake. These two circumstances had the ultimate effect of throwing the second part of the work, viz., SK, into disuse and oblivion¹¹ to such an extent that serious doubts have been expressed by modern scholars even on its genuineness. The non-availability of manuscripts of the work coupled with the fragmentary, imperfect and unconnected nature of the topical sūtras in the Pandit Reprint only augmented these doubts.

7. Thus M. L. Sandal in the Introduction to his English Translation of the Mīmāṃsā Sūtras has raised several points in this respect.¹²

“(In the SK) there are no adhikaraṇas and the sūtras are meagre ; it is an apocryphal portion of the Mīmāṃsā, most probably palmed off by Khaṇḍadeva as genuine.” (i)

“All the writers of the Mīmāṃsā have characterised Jaimini’s Mīmāṃsā as containing twelve chapters.” (ii)

“Strange to say that the SK is not mentioned by Alberuni and Abul Fazal.” (iii)

“The SK never found popularity amongst the students of Mīmāṃsā, and was, therefore, very properly consigned to oblivion. We do not find it mentioned in any ancient works prior to Rāmānuja in his Brahmasūtra-Bhāṣya or Madhusūdana Sarasvati in Prasthāna-bheda.” (iv)

“The style of the so-called Sūtras does not resemble that of Jaimini ; it is so very curt and mutilated that one cannot make out anything without the help of Bhāskara’s Bhāṭṭacandrikā.” (v)

“The last sūtra in the fourth pāda of the fourth chapter, which is the 16th chapter in the work, ends with the word यथा याज्यासंश्रैषः which has been repeated and imitated from the final endings in the Sāṃkhyaprapavāna or the Vedāntasūtras.” (vi)

“It is a valuable work in Mīmāṃsā literature and is more in the nature of the Kalpa Sūtras. It does not criticize any general principle as is done by Jaimini in his Mīmāṃsā. The well-known twelve principles have been discussed in the twelve chapters by Jaimini ; but in the work under description (SK) there is a simple description of the post-sacrificial minor ceremonies, which really form the subject of the Śrauta part of the Kalpa Sūtra. In this view which I take of the SK, it cannot be considered a supplement of Jaimini’s Mīmāṃsā.” (vii)

“I am of opinion that Saṅkarṣaṇa is a spurious work. Further I am of opinion that the work as it exists now in the present form, is either the work of Khaṇḍadeva or of Bhāskara.” (viii)

8. A careful examination of the SK and the references to it in later literature will show that the above objections have all been raised probably due to the insufficiency of reference and manuscript material of the SK available at the time when these objections were raised. In a learned paper on the subject, the late Prof. V. A. Ramaswami Sastri has endeavoured to meet these objections effectively.¹³ It might still be worthwhile, in this context, to consider these objections afresh in the light of the additional materials which have come to light as a result of further investigation.

9. (Obj. i and viii) The statement that there are no adhikaraṇas and that the sūtras are meagre is based on the presumption that the fragmentary words printed in bold type at the head of each paragraph in the Pandit Reprint comprise the sūtras of the work. In fact they are only the initial letters of the topical (adhikaraṇa) sūtras. The error in the statement will be obvious on an examination of the full sūtras now discovered and edited in the following pages. It may also be noted that neither is there the absence of adhikaraṇas nor are the sūtras meagre either in form or in number. Attention may be drawn here also to the fact when SK sūtras are referred to in later works, it is done so generally with reference to their adhikaraṇa, just as in the case of the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī-sūtras. Cf. Prabhāvalī of Śambhubhaṭṭa on Khaṇḍadeva's Bhāṭṭadīpikā : इदं हि प्रथमाध्यायसङ्कर्षकारणस्य सप्तमाधिकरणसूत्रम् । तत्र हि etc. (Edn. Madras University Sanskrit Series, Pt. I, 1957, p. 434, on Mīm. sūtra IV. iii. adhi. 15); अत्र च सङ्कर्षे द्वितीयाध्याये "मध्यमायामुपसद्यग्निश्चीयते प्रकृत्युपकृतत्वात्" (SK II. i. adhi. 26) इत्यधिकरणे etc. (Edn. N. S. Press, Bombay, 1921, p. 212a, on Mīm. sūtra II. iii. adhi. 10); Adhvara-Mīmāṃsā-Kutūhala-Vṛtti of Vāsudeva Dikṣita : सङ्कर्षकारणे द्वितीयाध्यायस्य द्वितीयपादाद्याधिकरणे etc. (Edn. Vani Vilas Sastra Series, No. 1, Srirangam, 1907 ff., p. 160, on Mīm. sūtra II. ii. 2).

10. To say either that the work is "most probably palmed off by Khaṇḍadeva" or that it is the work of Khaṇḍadeva (15th cent.) or Bhāskara (18th cent.) is equally unwarranted, for, besides references, specific and implied, to its author being Jaimini (see below § 19), the SK has been made mention of and quoted many centuries prior to Khaṇḍadeva by several authorities including Śabarasvāmin himself who quotes from SK with mention of its name in his Bhāṣya on the Mīm. sūtras X. iv. 32 and XII. ii. 11 (see below § 20). Śaṅkara, Rāmānuja and Śrīkanṭha quote from the SK in their Bhāṣyas on the Brahmasūtra प्रदानवदेव तदुक्तम् (III. iii. 43).¹⁴ Other authorities earlier to Khaṇḍadeva (15 cent.) like Vedāntadeśika (13-14 cent.) in his Seśvaramīmāṃsā (ib. pp. 2, 6) and the Prapancahṛdaya (ib. p. 39) refer to it (see above § 5). Even the references that Khaṇḍadeva makes to SK in his Bhāṭṭadīpikā are quite natural in their contexts; also they are so commented upon by his own pupil Śambhubhaṭṭa in his Prabhāvalī. Cf. on Mīm. sūtra IV. iii. adhi. 11 : 'यच्छकुपात्तयात्' इति दक्षिणाभेदान्नानाच्च प्रयोगभेदस्य सङ्कर्षे वक्ष्यमाणत्वात् । Com. : चतुरध्यायात्मक-सङ्कर्षकाण्डमीमांसायामित्यर्थः । (Bhāṭṭadīpikā with Prabhāvalī, *Madras Univ. I. p. 425) ; On Mīm. sūtra IV. iii. adhi. 15 : 'ऋत्वङ्गत्वं वा चित्येत्वङ्गे नोपपद्यते' (SK I i. 15) इति सङ्कर्षणसूत्रं तु ऋत्वपूर्वोपयोगमिप्रायं व्याख्येयम् । Com. : इदं हि प्रथमाध्यायसङ्कर्षकाण्डस्थं सप्तमाधिकरणसूत्रम् । तत्र हि etc. ib. p. 434).

11. (ii) The remark that "all writers of the Mīmāṃsā have characterised Jaimini's Mīmāṃsā as containing twelve chapters" has to be taken as an overstatement, in view of the fact that though the twelve-chapter-Dvādaśalakṣaṇī is taken as a self-complete unit and spoken of as such, when the question of the 'entire' Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra is considered, authorities speak of the Ṣoḍaśalakṣaṇī. Cf. Rāmānuja : तदाह वृत्तिकारः—'वृत्तात् कर्माधिगमादनन्तरं ब्रह्मविदिषेति" । वक्ष्यति च कर्मब्रह्ममीमांसयोरैकशास्त्र्यं, 'संहितभेदच्छारीरकं जैमिनीयेन षोडशलक्षणेनेति शास्त्रैऋत्वसिद्धिः" इति । (ib. p. 2). Vedāntadeśika has the same quotation from Vrttikāra Bodhāyana

Śrīkanṭha : 'इन्द्रप्रदानवत् यथा 'इन्द्राय राज्ञे पुरोडाशमेकादशकपालम् । स्वराज्ञे' इति गुणभेदात् पृथक् पुरोडाशप्रदानम् । 'नाना वा देवता पृथग्ज्ञानात्' (SK II. ii. adhi. 15) इति सङ्कर्षे तथोक्तत्वात् । in a different context : उभयाभिप्रायवेदी भगवान् बोधायनो विशतिलक्षणीं मीमांसां परस्परसंगमार्थं विस्तरेण व्याख्यादिति वृद्धा विदामासुः । तथा च स्वयमेवाह—“संहितमेतच्छारीरकं जैमिनीयेन षोडशलक्षणेनेति शास्त्रैकवसिद्धिः” इति । (ib. p. 45). Cf. also the passage : आसीत् षोडशलक्षणी श्रुतिपदा या धर्ममीमांसिका from Bhāskararāya quoted above (fn. 11).

12. (iii) The non-mention of the SK by Alberuni and Abul Fazal, while the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī is mentioned by them, can at best point to the wide prevalence of the latter work, but cannot be an affirmative argument for the non-existence, at that time, of the SK in the light of the evidences pointed out above.

13. (iv) Neither can the argument that the SK is not mentioned in any ancient work prior to Rāmānuja or Madhusūdana Sarasvatī stand when it has been shown above that not one, but several authorities prior to Rāmānuja have referred to the SK by name and have quoted from it. The work has also been commented upon by early authors (see below § 24-25).

14. (v) The statement that the style of the sūtras does not resemble that of Jaimini has obviously been made on the basis of the mutilated bits of a few of the sūtras found in the Pandit Reprint. An examination of the full text of the sūtras of ch. I now available will fully prove the error of the above observation and will also show how close it is to the style of the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī.

15. (vi) The repetition of the words in the concluding sūtra as याज्यासम्प्रैवो याज्यासम्प्रैवः is necessary for the sense of the sūtra even as Bhāskararāya shows in his commentary ; it should also be taken as an auspicious ending to the entire Pūrva-Mimāṃsā-Śāstra ; cf. Bhāskararāya: भ्राजस्वन्तं यजेति याज्यासम्प्रैवावृत्तिदर्शनात् । सूत्रे वाक्यावृत्तिः ‘शास्त्र’-परिसमाप्तियोजनायां । (Pandit Reprint, p. 126). It can never be asserted without any tangible evidence that “it is imitated from the final endings in the Sāṅkhyapra-vacana or the Vedāntasūtras.”

16. (vii) Sandal is right in saying that the SK is a valuable work in Mimāṃsā literature and is in the nature of the Kalpa Sūtras. It is as it should be. For, the main object of the SK is not the enunciation of new principles for the interpretation of dharmā but the application of known principles to ambiguous Vedic passages which require such elucidation (see above). The likeness, therefore, which some portions of the SK might bear to the Kalpa Sūtras does not go against the authenticity of the SK; it may only support its authenticity.

17. In a recent publication, Citations in Śabara-Bhāṣya (Deccan College Dissertation Series, No. 8, Poona, 1952), D. V. Garge seems to present a divided opinion, first conceding the probability but then expressing a doubt, when he says, pp. 4-5 : “Where Śabara refers to a portion of Jaimini’s work as Sāṅkarśa, he probably refers to this very Sāṅkarśakāṇḍa. Unfortunately his Bhāṣya on that portion is not available. Now Kumāṛila who carefully notes the number of the sūtras of Jaimini passed over by Śabara and explains the absence of a bhāṣya thereon, was not expected to omit a reference to a whole kāṇḍa like Sāṅkarśa as uncommented on by Śabara.” The reasoning here does not seem to be correct. We can expect Kumāṛila to call attention to Śabara’s passing over a sūtra, when he (Kumāṛila) is commenting on that sūtra. But we cannot “expect” Kumāṛila to call attention while commenting on the Śābarabhāṣya of the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī portion to his (Śabara’s) not having commented upon the SK.

18. On the extent of the Pūrvamīmāṃsā, Ganganatha Jha observes in his Pūrvamīmāṃsā in its Sources (Banaras, 1942, p. 11) : “The work as generally known to us consists of twelve adhyāyas ; but there is a belief—which appears to have some foundation—that there are four more adhyāyas of the Jaiminīyasūtra known as the Sāṅkarśakāṇḍa”. Elsewhere,¹⁵ after commenting on the two quotations in the Śābarabhāṣya from SK, Jha observes : “There thus can be no doubt that there is a section (of Jaimini’s sūtras perhaps) under the name of Sāṅkarśa and that it has been commented upon by Śabara. Here is an interesting point of investigation for manuscript hunters and researchers.” It is such a search that has led to the discovery of the present manuscript of the SK and its edition.

Authorship of the SK

19. Authorities, both late and ancient, have, when context required them to speak on the authorship of the SK, mentioned Jaimini as its author. The views to this effect of Rāmānuja, Vedāntadeśika, Appayya Dikṣita and the Prapañcahṛdaya are evident from relevant passages quoted above (see f.n. 1 ; §, 5, 11). Śambhubhaṭṭa’s Prabhāvalī explains the the term Mīmāṃsā thus : मीमांसा—‘अथातो धर्मजिज्ञासा’ इत्यादिना जैमिनिप्रणीता द्वादशाध्यायी सङ्कर्षकाण्डात्मिका चतुरध्यायी च कर्ममीमांसा, ‘अथातो ब्रह्मजिज्ञासा’

15. Shabara-Bhāṣya, Translated into English by Ganganatha Jha, Pt. III, GOS 73, Baroda, 1936, Intro. vii. The doubts that Jha has entertained regarding the identity of the SK sūtra quoted by Śabara under XII. ii. 11, which he could compare only with its opening letters in the Pandit Reprint, will be set at rest by comparing it with the full sūtra available in the present edition, इत्यादिना व्यासप्रणीता चतुरध्यायी शारीरकमीमांसा च । (Edn. N. S. Press, Bombay, 1921, p. 43^b). Madhusūdana Sarasvatī in his Prasthānabheda, a work describing the systems of Indian learning, says of Mīmāṃsā : एवं मीमांसापि द्विविधा, कर्ममीमांसा, शारीरकमीमांसा चेति । तत्र द्वादशाध्यायी कर्ममीमांसा, 'अथातो धर्मजिज्ञासा' इत्यादिः, 'अन्वाहार्थं च दर्शनात्' इत्यन्ता भगवता जैमिनिना प्रणीता ।तथा सङ्कर्षकाण्डमध्यध्यायचतुष्टयात्मकं जैमिनिप्रणीतम् । (Edn. Vani Vilas Press, Srirangam, 1912, p. 11).

20. Śabarāsvāmin, in his Bhāṣya on Mīm. sūtra X. iv. 32 and XII.ii. 11, quotes two SK sūtras,¹⁶ both of which are traced to the present SK, which thus proves its authenticity. Śabara's quoting these sūtras with the words iti Sāṅkarṣe vakṣyate and iti Sāṅkarṣe vakṣyati, respectively, in the same manner as he quotes in his Bhāṣya any posterior sūtra in the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī without the mention of the author in the sense of इति (सूत्रकारेण जैमिनिना) वक्ष्यते and इति (सूत्रकारो जैमिनिः) वक्ष्यति, tends to the natural deduction that here too he means only इति सङ्कर्षे (सूत्रकारेण जैमिनिना) वक्ष्यते and इति सङ्कर्षे (सूत्रकारो जैमिनिः) वक्ष्यति ।

21. The Vedāntasūtras too seem to presuppose the SK. It is generally known that when Bādarāyaṇa wants to call attention to some topic already dealt with in the Mīmāṃsāsūtras, he refers to it with the word तदुक्तम् । For instance Br. sūtra III. iii. 33, अक्षरधियां त्वबरोधः सामान्यतद्भावाभ्यां औपसदवत् तदुक्तम्, refers to Mīm. sūtra III. iii. 8, गुणामुख्यव्यतिक्रमे तदर्थत्वान्मुख्येन वेदसंयोगः ; and Br. sūtra III. iii. 26, हानौ तूपायनं शब्दशेषत्वात् कुशाञ्छन्दःस्तुत्युपागानवत् तदुक्तम्, to Mīm. sūtra X. viii. 4, अपि तु वाक्यशेषः स्यादन्याय्यत्वाद् विकल्पस्य विधीनाभेदेदशः स्यात् । Now, another sūtra of Bādarāyaṇa, प्रदानवदेवु तदुक्तम् (Br. sūtra III. iii. 43) has been, as mentioned before (in § 10), pointed out by Śāṅkara, Rāmānuja and Śrīkaṅṭha as referring to the SK sūtra, II. ii. adhi. 15, नाना वा देवता पृथग्ज्ञानात् । This implies clearly that just as Bādarāyaṇa has referred to the Pūrvatantra-Dvādaśalakṣaṇī of Jaimini by तदुक्तं elsewhere, in the third instance above suffixed with तदुक्तं, he has referred only to the Pūrvatantra-SK of Jaimini.

16. Cf. under X.iv.32 : विधिनिगमभेदः प्रकृतौ कृतः । "स्त्रिष्टकृद्विकारश्च वनस्पतिः" (SK II.iv. adhi. 20) इति सङ्कर्षे वक्ष्यते ; and under XII.ii.11 : नार्थः पुनराह्वानेन । नैव पशोर्हविष्कृदस्ति औषधाहर्हा । "अवहननार्था वा यथा पत्नीतुल्यः श्रूयते" (SK I.i.36) इति सङ्कर्षे वक्ष्यति ।

Kāśakṛtsna, the Mīmāṃsaka

22. It has been suggested that SK might be a work of Kāśakṛtsna on the basis of a quotation from Tattvaratnākara found in the Tattvavārttika, a commentary on the Śrībhāṣya of Rāmānuja :

कर्मदेवताब्रह्मगोचरा सा त्रिधोद्बभौ सूत्रकारतः । .

जैमिनेर्मुनेः काशकृत्स्नतो बादरायणादित्यतः क्रमात् ॥

That there was an ancient Mīmāṃsaka by name Kāśakṛtsna who was held in esteem by Viśiṣṭādvaita authors, is not a point at dispute. He has even been mentioned by name in the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali¹⁷ and in the Brahmasūtras.¹⁸ But as K. C. Chatterjee, who has a short study on Kāśakṛtsna, says, “the San̄karṣa Kāṇḍa as published from Benares contains nothing like the view attributed to Kāśakṛtsna by Bādarāyaṇa,¹⁹ the author of the Brahmasūtras, and though the San̄karṣa Kāṇḍa is fairly early, ... it is still difficult to hold that Kāśakṛtsna is its author. On the other hand, the fact that Śabara says: Iti San̄karṣe vakṣyati (XII.2.11) would lead one to suppose that according to Śabara the San̄karṣa Kāṇḍa also is from the pen of the author of the Mīmāṃsā Sūtras.”²⁰ Now Vedāntadeśika, the prominent exponent of Rāmānuja’s Viśiṣṭādvaita, who also mentions Kāśakṛtsna reverently in the same order as in the above-quoted verse in an introductory verse to his Seśvaramīmāṃsā :

स जयति जैमिनिरादौ जयति पुनः काशकृत्स्नोऽपि ।

continues : वृत्तिलक्षणं भीमासाख्यमेकं शास्त्रम् । ...सङ्कर्षारम्भः ...“संहितमेतच्छारीरकं जैमिनीयेन षोडशलक्षणेति शास्त्रैकत्वसिद्धिः” इति वृत्तिग्रन्थश्च etc. (ib. pp. 1-2). Vedāntadeśika’s quoting with approbation a statement as above clearly indicates his view that he considered only Jaimini as the author of ‘all’ the sixteen chapters of the Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra ; and the natural deduction is that though he revered Kāśakṛtsna as a great Mīmāṃsaka, he did not consider him as the author of any part of the 16-chapter Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra.

17. Cf. Mahābhāṣya on Pāṇini IV.i.4., 93 ; iii.155 : काशकृत्स्निना प्रोक्ता भीमासा काशकृत्स्नीमर्धाति काशकृत्स्ना ब्राह्मणी ।

Scope of the SK

23. The general nature of the SK has been indicated already at the beginning of this Introduction. On the significance of the word Saṅkarṣa, Devasvāmin, the Bhāṣyakāra of SK, quotes at the beginning of his work, an old verse :—

सिद्धैस्तु लक्षणैरेतैः श्रुतियोगं प्रदर्शयन् ।

लक्षणानि श्रुतीश्वैव सङ्कष्याधिजगौ मुनिः ॥

Thus in the SK the author correlated the Vedic passages through the established principles of interpretation by bringing together the principles and the passages concerned. The term saṅkarṣa emphasises the main function of the SK, viz., the clear and comprehensive exposition of Vedic propositions scattered in Vedic texts : Cf. सम्यक् निःशेषतया स्फुटतया च कृष्ट्वा आकृष्य विप्ररीणवेदवाक्येभ्यः संपृद्य निर्णीयन्त इति सङ्कर्षमदव्युत्पत्तिः । Ānandagiri explains the word saṅkarṣa thus : सङ्कष्यते कर्मकाण्डस्थमेवावशिष्टं कर्म संक्षिप्योच्यत इति सङ्कर्षो देवताकाण्डम् । (under Saṅkarabhāṣya on Br. Sūtra III. iii. 43). Its stress on the ritual of upāsana is drawn attention to by Madhusūdana Sarasvatī in the Prasthānabheda : तथा सङ्कर्षकाण्डमप्यध्याय-चतुष्टयात्मकं जैमिनिप्रणीतम् । तच्च देवताकाण्डसंज्ञया प्रसिद्धमप्युपासनाख्यकर्मप्रतिपादकत्वात् कर्ममीमांसान्तर्गतमेव । (ib. p. 11).

Commentaries on the SK

24. The Prapañcahṛdaya mentions a long line of commentators of the SK, Bodhāyana, Upavaṛṣa, Devasvāmin, Bhavadāsa and Saṅkarṣaṇa : तस्य विंशत्यध्यायनिबद्धस्य मीमांसाशास्त्रस्य कृतकोटिनामधेयं भाष्यं बोधायनेन कृतम् । तद् ग्रन्थवाङ्मयभयादुपेक्ष्य किञ्चित् संक्षिप्तम् उपवर्षेण कृतम् । तदपि मन्दमतीन् प्रति दुष्प्रतिभार्दं विस्तीर्णत्वादुपेक्ष्य षोडशलक्षणपूर्वमीमांसाशास्त्रमात्रस्य देवस्वामिना अतिसंक्षिप्तं कृतम् । भवदासेनापि कृतं जैमिनीयभाष्यम् । पुनर्द्विकारणं धर्ममीमांसाशास्त्रे पूर्वस्य तन्त्रकाण्डस्य आचार्यशत्रुस्वामिना अतिसंक्षेपेण सङ्कर्षकाण्डं द्वितीयमुपेक्ष्य कृतं भाष्यम् । तथा देवताकाण्डस्य सङ्कर्षेण (var. सङ्कर्षणेन) (ib. p. 39).

25. According to the tradition recorded above, Bodhāyana wrote a Bhāṣya entitled Kṛtakoti on the entire Śāstra of twenty chapters. Finding this too elaborate and discursive, Upavaṛṣa wrote for the entire work a succinct Vṛtti. Manuscripts of these two commentaries are now not available, but fragments from them are preserved in quotations in later works.²¹ Since even Upavaṛṣa's commentary was found to be tough and

21. Upavaṛṣa is quoted by Śabara, Śaṅkara and other writers. For a discussion on some of the views of Upavaṛṣa as known from quotations, see V. A. Ramaswami Sastri, 'The Conception and Number of Pramāṇas according to Upavaṛṣa,' J of the Ganganatha Jha Res. Inst., II (1944-45) 237-42, 321-25 ; and 'Old Vṛttikāras of the Pūrva Mīmāṃsā Sūtras', IHQ X (1934) 431-48.

lengthy for the mediocrity, Devasvāmin wrote a shorter commentary on the first sixteen chapters constituting the Pūrvamīmāṃsā-Śāstra. Several manuscripts of Devasvāmin's Bhāṣya on the SK are available;²² he is also at times quoted in later works. The fourth commentary on the entire Pūrvamīmāṃsā was by Bhavadāsa. Manuscripts of Bhavadāsa's Vṛtti are yet to be traced. Bhavadāsa is earlier to Devasvāmin since his commentary is found quoted by Devasvāmin.²³ The Ślokaavārttika of Kumārila too refers to Bhavadāsa as to have been presupposed by Śabara.²⁴ Lastly, an author by name Saṅkarṣaṇa commented on the SK portion alone. Possibly this last-mentioned writer got the name 'Saṅkarṣaṇa' for having commented on the SK.

26. The Prapañcahṛdaya draws attention to the fact that Śabara did not comment on the SK but restricted his Bhāṣya to the Tantra Kāṇḍa (Dvādaśalakṣaṇī) (cf. Qn. in § 24). And, nowhere in any ancient text is to be found any reference to Śabara's commentary on the SK. However, some modern scholars have suggested that the SK "was commented upon by Śabara (which) is clear from the Śabarabhāṣya

Umesh Misra's doubting remark that "he (Devasvāmin) is also believed to have written (a commentary) on the Saṅkarṣakāṇḍa" (vide p. 36 of his Critical Bibliography to the Pūrvamīmāṃsā in its Sources by Ganganatha Jha), can be affirmed in the face of the availability of these manuscripts of the work.

23. Cf. Devasvāmin's Bhāṣya under SK III. ii. 1: अस्मिन् पादे 'अपूर्वात्तथा सोमः' इत्यारभ्य आपादपरिसमाप्तेः भवदासेनैव भाष्यमिति ।

24. Some of Bhavadāsa's views are mentioned by Kumārila as to have been criticised by Śabara; Cf. Ślokaavārttika :

प्रदर्शनार्थमित्येके केचिन्नानार्थवादिनः ।

which Pārthasarathi Miśra explains: उपलम्भपक्षं परिगृह्णाति—वृत्त्यन्तरेष्विति । केषांचिद् भवदासादीनां वृत्त्यन्तरेषु ।पदद्वयमर्थद्वयवाचि लोकप्रसिद्धमपि भवदासेनैकपदीकृत्यानन्तर्यमात्रार्थं व्याख्यातम् । तच्च अयुक्तमित्युपलम्भ इति । (ib. p. 11-12). itself ; under sūtra X. iv. 32, and XII. ii. 11....²⁵ This suggestion of theirs presumes that the passages cited under the above two sūtras are quotations from Śabara's own commentary. But, as can be verified from the text of the full sūtras now edited, the passages in question are merely quotations of the SK sūtras and not of Bhāṣya passages. Neither can we expect Śabara to 'quote' with the word 'iti' in the course of the Bhāṣya on an earlier sūtra, his own posterior Bhāṣya-passages, which he had yet to write.

27. Bhāskararāya in his commentary on the SK has several quotations from a SK-Bhāṣya. These, the editor of the Pandit Reprint has presumed to be from Śabara's Bhāṣya on the SK, which he supposes to be lost (see Pandit Reprint, p. 1 and Intro., p. 6). These quotations have, however, been traced to Devasvāmin's Bhāṣya, of which as stated above, several manuscripts are available ; this goes to show that the Bhāṣya quoted by Bhāskararāya is that of Devasvāmin and not of Śabara. Thus the tradition recorded above that Śabara commented only on the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī seems to be correct.

28. A commentary on the SK by Govindopādhyāya is quoted by the dharmaśāstra writer Hemādri (c. 1230-1300) in his Caturvargacintāmaṇi, Pariśeṣakhaṇḍa (Bibl. Ind, Vol. III, pt. ii, p.324) : तथा सङ्कर्षे गोविन्दोपाध्यायेनोक्तं—यस्मिन्नहनि etc.

29. Of later authors, Rājacūḍāmaṇi Dikṣita (c. 1580-1650), the prolific writer patronised by king Raghunātha Nāyak of Tanjore, wrote a commentary called Saṅkarṣanyāyamuktāvalī on the SK.²⁶ A manuscript of this commentary has been described and extracted from by Hultsch in his Reports of Sanskrit Mss. in Southern India (Vol. II, No. 1489, pp. 67, 141). The work opens with the introductory verse :

तेजः स्त्रीपुं(स्व)भावव्यतिकरसुभगं भावुकं भावयित्वा
कामाक्षीं मातरं तामपि भित्त्वरणं (? एान्) श्रीनिवासाध्वरीन्द्रान् ।
सोदर्यादर्धनारीश्वरमखिवरतोऽधीत्य सर्वं च शास्त्रं
सङ्कर्षेन्यायमुक्तां प्रथयति कतिचिद् राजचूडामणीष्टी ॥

The colophon extracted by Hultsch from this ms., seems to indicate that it extended only to the end of ch. I ; cf. इति सङ्कर्षेन्यायमुक्तावल्यां

Cf. also Umesh Misra's Critical Bibliography, p. 20 : "Besides this Bhāṣya, he (Śabara) also wrote a c. on the Saṅkarṣa which is clear from his own words (vide his Bhāṣya X. iv. 32 ; XII. ii. 11)." See also D. V. Garge, Citations in Śabarabhāṣya, p. 4 ; K. C. Chatterjee, IHQ VIII (1932) 226 ; etc.

प्रथमाध्यायस्य चतुर्थः पादः । (ib. p. 141). This commentary is made mention of by the author along with his other works which he enumerates at the conclusion of his Kāvya-darpaṇa :²⁷

नव्या सङ्कर्षकाण्डस्य न्यायमुक्तावली तथा ।

It is mentioned also by Bālayajñavedeśvara in the introduction to his commentary on Rājacūḍāmaṇi Dikṣita's Rukmiṇīkalyāṇa :

तेन निष्कृतिदीपिकां निरूपमां नित्याग्निहोत्रस्य च
ख्यातं तन्त्रशिखामणिं तदनु सङ्कर्षस्य मुक्तावलीम् ।

(Intro. verse 22, ib. p. 5)²⁸

The two other works of Rājacūḍāmaṇi Dikṣita on Mīmāṃsā are his Tantrasīkhāmaṇi, a commentary on Jaimini's Dvādaśalakṣaṇī and Karpūravartikā, a commentary on the Śāstrādīpikā of Pārthasārathi Mīśra.

30 The latest commentary we have on the SK is by the 18th cent. polymath Bhāskararāya (c. 1700-1760) which has been edited serially in the Banaras Pandit (NS) vols. XIV-XV (1892-1893) and subsequently issued as a Reprint from the Pandit in 1894. Bhāskararāya who is an ardent admirer of Khaṇḍadeva says at the close of the work that he intended to supplement through his commentary the Bhāṭṭadīpikā of Khaṇḍadeva which extended only through the first twelve lakṣaṇas of the Mīmāṃsā-Śāstra, leaving out the last four :

खण्डदेवकृतभाट्टदीपिका लक्षणैः कतिपरैरसंमृता ।

इत्युदीक्ष्य बुधभास्कराग्निचिद्भारती वरिभरां बभूव ताम् ॥

(Pandit Reprint, p. 126)

He also expresses his gratification that by his supplement the Bhāṭṭadīpikā had become complete with all the sixteen kalā-s and had become the full-fledged Bhāṭṭacandrikā :

अयावधि कृतिरेषाऽऽद्यन्तविहीनेति दीपिकाख्याऽऽसीत् ।

षोडशकलाभिरधुना परिपूर्णा भाट्टचन्द्रिकात्वमगात् ॥ (ib. p. 127)

The Text of the SK Sūtras

31. Despite the availability of the commentaries of Devasvāmin and Bhāskararāya, the problem of the text of the SK Sūtras has remained

27. Ed. Vani Vilas Press, Srirangam. Madras Ms. D 12809, Des. Catalogue, vol. XXII, p. 8616.

28. Umesh Misra's remark : "It is also believed that he (Rājacūḍāmaṇi Dikṣita) wrote also a c. on the Sāṅkarsakāṇḍa" (Critical Bibliography, ib. p. 62) may be stated affirmatively in view of this ms. and corroborative evidence, as baffling as ever. In his Short History of the Pūrva-Mīmāṃsā Literature, T. R. Chintamani observes: "It is unfortunate that the Devatā Kāṇḍa has not come down to us in its proper form. In fact we do not know the Sūtra text of that Kāṇḍa. A good deal of research is necessary to find out (from the commentary) what exactly are the Sūtras. It will be worth the trouble to take upon ourselves to investigate into and find out the text of the Saṅkarṣa Kāṇḍa Sūtras."²⁹

32. Bhāskararāya's commentary is extremely brief and contains only the opening letters of the adhikaraṇa sūtras. Also it generally gives only the pūrvapakṣa and siddhānta views of each adhikaraṇa and does not comment on the sūtras individually. A definite idea, therefore, of the extent, number or text of the SK sūtras is not possible from this source.

33. The Bhāṣya of Devasvāmin is more elaborate, but "most of the manuscripts of SK (Bhāṣya) do not contain the sūtras in full form and in their sequence."³⁰ "A careful perusal of all these (mss. of the Bhāṣya) may reveal to us the correct text of the sūtras but that should be done after a good amount of work."³¹ The difficulty of resurrecting the sūtras from the Bhāṣya is increased by the similarity of the language of the two. The frequent occurrence of Vedic quotations and cross references of complete or bits of sūtras in the Bhāṣya adds to this difficulty. In the absence of a definite knowledge of the text of the sūtras and their sequence, every other passage in the Bhāṣya presents the problem as to whether it is a pūrvapakṣa or a siddhānta, an elucidation or a quotation; in fact this absence of the definite knowledge of the sūtra text has hitherto handicapped a proper understanding of the Bhāṣya and a critical edition of the same.

34. The difficulties outlined above might be illustrated by the results of two attempts at the reconstruction of the sūtras from Devasvāmin's Bhāṣya which has been observed to be "probably the only standard work which forms the most important source for reconstructing the lost sūtras of Saṅkarṣa Kāṇḍa."³²

31. T. R. Chintamani, ib., p. 272.

32. V. A. Ramaswami Sastri, Intro. to Tattvabindu, p. 58.

35. Using the Madras and Adyar manuscripts of the Bhāṣya, T. R. Chintamani has reconstructed “a few sūtras covering a portion of the first pāda of the first adhyāya” and has appended it to his thesis on Mimāṃsā literature referred to above. These reconstructed sūtras number nineteen. A comparison of these with the Sūtra text now discovered and edited gives the following analysis: Non-sūtras (i.e., quotations or bits of the Bhāṣya taken as sūtras) 9. Inflated sūtras (i.e., sūtras inflated with bits of the Bhāṣya) 1. Incomplete sūtras 3. Otherwise defective sūtras 3. All-correct sūtras 3, (i.e., 3 out of 19). Sūtras left out in the middle 5.

36. The other attempt at such reconstruction is by V. A. Ramaswami Sastri in his paper on ‘Further light on the Sāṅkarṣa Kāṇḍa’³³, where he reconstructs ten sūtras from the ‘Trivandrum manuscripts’ of the Bhāṣya. Of the reconstructed sūtras, one is not a sūtra, another is incomplete and two others defective otherwise. Reconstruction from the Bhāṣya is, therefore, a dubious process and is no safe or sure method for arriving at the original text of the SK Sūtras.

37. In the circumstances, hardly any excuse is needed for the present edition of the SK Sūtras in their correct and full form from the Sūtra ms. now available, though it is incomplete and extends only to the beginning of the second chapter.

Present edition of the SK

38. The text of the sūtras preserved in the manuscript available now is generally pure. The manuscript is also well preserved and has few scribal errors, lacunae etc. In the present edition the text in the manuscript has been collated with the full sūtras and fragments of sūtras found in the commentaries of Devasvāmin and Bhāskararāya, the former from its Madras Ms. R. 2695 (a paper ms. in which the variants in three mss. of the Bhāṣya are recorded) and the latter in the Pandit Reprint. It was found that though Bhāskararāya comments only on the adhikaraṇa sūtras, his commentary contains portions of several sūtras and sometimes even full sūtras, though these have not been so indicated in the printed edition.

39. The chapters of the SK are numbered XIII-XVI by Bhāskararāya, taking the work as a direct continuation of the Dvādaśalakṣaṇī. Such a numbering is found also in the flyleaf of the Sūtra ms. where the pratikas of the sūtras are written. In the present edition, however, the chapters have been numbered from I onwards as found in the body of the Sūtra ms. and in accordance with the practice of the Mīmāṃsā writers who quote from the SK. The work is almost always referred to by the title Saṅkarṣa Kāṇḍa but in a few places it is referred to as Saṅkarṣaṇa Kāṇḍa. The former title which is found in the Sūtra ms. and is also found explained in the commentaries (see above § 23) is adopted in this edition. For the easy comprehension of the argument of the text, each sūtra has been indicated as to its being a pūrvapakṣa, siddhānta or guṇa sūtra by adding after it within brackets the letters पु, सि and गु. The SK sūtras traced to certain Mīmāṃsā and other works have been given in an Appendix at the end of the edition. The Index of Sūtras contains all the sūtras of the SK known (including those known only from quotations) and is intended to facilitate reference and to help in the further identification of the SK sūtras quoted in other works.

40. It will only be an act of dutifulness if I gratefully mention here the late Prof. V. A. Ramaswami Sastri who did spade-work in this field by establishing the authenticity of the SK and who created in me an interest in these supposedly lost sūtras of Jaimini which led to the discovery of the present manuscript and this edition. I am indebted also to Sri S. R. Krishnamurti Sastri, Professor, Sanskrit College, Madras, for his help in fixing the text of the sūtras and in classifying them.
